Refutes Attorney-General.

The court proceedings for the day were commenced by the argument of Attorney John S. Miller, who had waived a portion of his time in favor of the Attorney General, saying that it was evident to the most casual reader of the inter-state commerce law that no distinction existed in that act between evidence given voluntarily and evidence given under compulsion. He declared that there could not be the slightest doubt that the defendants in the present case were entitled to immunity.

Attorney Miller concluded his arga-

Attorney Miller concluded his argument shortly after 3 o'clocx, and Judge Humphrey at once commenced speaking from the bench, announcing his decision, part of which was as follows:

The defendants are indicted under the Sherman act, charged with a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Packers' Contention.

Packers' Contention.

"They have pleaded that as to them that act should be suspended because they were compelled to furnish evidence concerning the matter in the indictment, and under the law such furnishing of evidence gives them immunity. The law under consideration for the construction of which the court is called upon to decide, is the commerce and labor act. It is claimed that the primary purpose of this act was to enable Congress to provide, through the channel of officials charged with the execution of the laws, remedian legislation.

"The act is a substitute for one of the most cherished rights of the American citizen which is the right to remain silent when questions about any subject the answer to which might incriminate him. It is conceded that the provision of the constitution could not be taken from the citizen without giving him something valuable in return. The privilege of the smeandment permits a refusal to answer a question relating to the offense. The privilege must be granted to the witness at the time. The immunity flows to the witness without any claim on his part.

The Government's Claim.

The Government's Claim.

"It is contended that the defendants in this case were volunteers because they baggled with Garnfeld at times, debated, resisted, gave less than he asked, and withheld some things. The record does show that, but the fact remains that every approach was made by the government. Garfield made his demands and it does not to my mind destroy the character of the compulsion under which they acted, that the defendants after having considered the law, and after having decided that they had no legal right to resist still debated with the commissioner in the hope of inducing him to make something less than he originally demanded is contended that the defendants something less than he originally demanded.

"Garfield came to the defendants and held up before them the powers of his office. They did not go to him and volunteer anything. Now, since the defendants volunteered nothing, but gave only what was demanded by an officer who had the right to make the demand, and gave in good faith under a sense of legal compulsion. I am of the opinion that they were entitled to immunity."

Judge Humphrey then entered upon an elaborate discussion of the contention by the Government that he witnesses did not give under compulsion, but they did not give under compulsion. He said that he could add nothing to what had been adduced by way of argument on that subject, but was clearly of the opinion that the best judgment to be had from all the authorities is that the subpochatis a useless and superficial thing after the parties are together.

May Ask an Appeal.

May Ask an Appeal.

The formal statement declaring in favor of the individual defendants was then made by the court.

Immediately following the decision District Attorney Morrison anid.

"I will not make any record now in regard to the motions for new trials or an appeal. I do not know whether I am entitled to an appeal or not. I shall have to ask time to look it up.

"We ask for judgment on the verdict," said Attorney Miller. "And I make a formal motion that the defendants, the individuals, be discharged.

"That is allowed," said Judge Humphrey. "They are discharged, That goes in the verdict."

The attorneys for the packers, although plainly showing their pleasure at the decision, refrained from any expression of their feelings other than saying, "I am satisfied."

Those Who Will Go Free.

Those Who Will Go Free.

"Of course I have no criticism to offer," said Mr. Morrison. "I have argued the case as I saw the law and thought my lew was correct. Somebody always has to be beaten, and this time I see, at cast I have heard, that I am wrong. All the formal motions for a new trial still be made later."
